FROM: Christy Park

RE: News Item For Newsletter

"Work made by youngsters who come to MassArt every Saturday morning for classes was taken (or torn) off the wall, thrown on the floor, damaged, and lost. What does this say about our school? What it says about some members of the MassArt community is painful. Vandalized art work says that there are people here who have not learned anything at all.

On Saturday morning the children and their parents came to open house expecting to see the work. How can we explain this to them? What can we say that can really make the situation better? How do you tell a twelve-year-old that someone needed the push pins that were holding her drawing up? How do you tell an eleven-year-old that his picture has been lost, that somebody didn't think it was worth taking care of?"
